

6 SIGNS IT'S TIME TO Replace Your Fence

Wood fences are a beautiful addition to any yard, but they don't last forever. If you notice any of these signs, it's time to get it replaced

1

Damage From an Accident

Incidents such as your fence being hit by a falling tree or by a vehicle typically cause significant damage to the quality, structure, and stability of your wood.

2

Broken or Missing Boards

Broken or missing boards compromise your fence's level of safety and structural integrity, making it a safety hazard until it is replaced.

3

Holes In the Wood

Holes in your wood fence are most likely caused by insects, wildlife, or microorganisms, and usually means there is extensive damage under the surface

4

Splintering

Cracks and splits in your wood indicate that it is deteriorating and weak, making it vulnerable to storms or harsh weather conditions.

5

Staining

Yellow or grey stains on your fence are tell-tale signs that the wood has started rotting or molding.

6

Leaning Fences

Leaning is usually caused by the weakening of fence posts, which increases your chance of developing warped or broken fence boards.
